What is ETEA?

ETEA is a university institution founded in 1963 by the Society of Jesus. It is nowadays a Faculty of Economic and Business Sciences affiliated to the University of Córdoba.

As well as ESADE (1958, Barcelona) and ICADE (1961, Madrid), ETEA followed the University of Deusto's steps (1916, Bilbao), to expand Business Studies all over Spain. ETEA is the promoting institution of the Universidad Loyola Andalucía, and will be fully integrated in the Universidad Loyola Andalucía from September 2013.

Nowadays ETEA-Loyola offers a wide range of courses in the fields of business and economics through our Bachelor Degree in Business Administration and the official Master Degree in Research Methods in Economics and Business Sciences. Besides, our business school, Loyola Leadership School, offers a wide selection of master degrees, executive education, programmes and in house programmes for the best education, both personal and professional, for people and companies.

All this in a multilingual and multicultural environment as the one Loyola School of Languages, Culture and Communication proposes -Loyola SOL is much more than just a School of Languages- and also the ETEA Foundation for Development and Cooperation, institution for research, education and action to serve those most in need, with over 25 years of work in America, Asia and Africa.

What is the Universidad Loyola Andalucía?

The Universidad Loyola Andalucía is a social initiative by the Society of Jesus, whose mission is to train people, men and women for others; to train not the best people in the world, but the best people for the world.

Dr. Gabriel Pérez Alcalá
Rector of Universidad Loyola Andalucía and ETEA-Loyola's Director

Promoted by the Universidad Loyola Andalucía Foundation (constituted in June 2010), the Andalusian Parliament passed the Acknowledgement Law of the Universidad Loyola Andalucía on November 23rd 2011, thus enabling the university to offer bachelor degrees in 2013-2014 in two campuses: the one we have had for the last years, ETEA in Córdoba, and Palmas Altas in Sevilla.

The Universidad Loyola Andalucía will provide a wide offer of bachelor degrees in the areas of business, economics, law, political and social sciences, communication, education and engineering. It will also have a strong vocation for research, with more than 15 innovative interdisciplinary strands, thus becoming a research university.

Sustainability as a goal

An optimized architectonic design and the use of renewable energies minimize the use of polluting energies. Due to its design, construction and sustainability standards, Palmas Altas has been awarded with the Leed Platinum certification, created by the US Building Council, the highest certification in this category.

Structure of the Universidad Loyola Andalucía

Training and research activities of the Universidad Loyola Andalucía will be developed in seven areas which clearly respond to its mission and vocation: business, economics, law, political and social sciences, communication, education, engineering and technology.

The Universidad Loyola Andalucía, in order to perform its activities, will be structured around the following centres and departments, as well as research institutes that will be implemented with institutions such as, but not limited to, ABENGOA.

What differentiates us?

In order to train professionals who lead the change process for our society, it is necessary to train capable and skilled people.

Dr. Francisco Martínez Estudillo
Vicerector of Academic Studies

The prestige that ETEA has acquired over its 50 years of existence is supported by the extensive teaching and research experience of our professors, who have a deep knowledge of the economic and business world.

The educative project rests in several performance lines: languages, debate club, theatre, sport activities, complementary training courses, seminars, internships, academic guidance, academic exchanges... in reduced groups of 60 students.

This methodology will still be applied at the Universidad Loyola Andalucía as it is based on the pedagogical principles of the best European and American university tradition. The same educational principles of exigency and excellence supported by the Society of Jesus.

Since it was founded in 1963, ETEA-Loyola has trained more than 15,000 people, our patrimony.

ETEA-Loyola is what their alumni become. Our philosophy is our passion for continuous improvement. Therefore ETEA-Loyola Alumni Association seeks to keep contact with university alive.

An International Point of View

Francisco de Borja Martín Garrido
International Relations Director

"Internationalization is real and necessary within the global environment of multicultural societies. Therefore, ETEA-Loyola has bilateral agreements with universities in more than 30 countries and the Universidad Loyola Andalucía is included within a network of 230 universities all over the world, which represents a big opportunity for our students, teaching Faculty and staff."

ETEA-Loyola's internationalization vocation goes beyond student and staff mobility programmes. It is our priority to actively integrate and participate in university networks; to promote the involvement of our researchers in international research teams and the creation of international work teams; and to encourage the participation of our bachelor, master and postgraduate students in international mobility programmes. The EU Programmes for student mobility, such as Erasmus, are an important part of our students' studies and internship abroad activities.

The International Office organizes every year several Seminars taught in English for our national and international students, with multinational teaching staff, concerning current economic matters or subjects related to the different academic areas taught in our Degrees. These Seminars expand the knowledge the students have on the discussed subjects, offering an added value as they can obtain ECTS credits through them. An increasing part of ETEA-LOYOLA's academic courses are taught in English.

Clear orientation towards employment

Esteban Almirón

Employability and Entrepreneurship Director

"The labour world: a permanent challenge towards which we put constant effort so that our students will have a professional and business future. In this sense, we have mandatory national and international internships supervised by ETEA-Loyola, job offers, labour market orientation, company presentations and company visits. Our best resources devoted to facilitate the best possible destiny. Furthermore, the Leonardo da Vinci Programme helps the mobility framework of recent graduates so that they can do internships in an European country. All these services and activities are opened to our International students."

Loyola 360°

Loyola 360°, is a group of ETEA-Loyola students who collaborate with the International Office in the integration of exchange students. Among other functions, buddies pick up international students when they arrive in Córdoba, help international students in finding accommodation, organize and participate in activities and tourist visits during their stay in Córdoba and help international students to fix their class schedule, etc.

Loyola Housing

International students usually rent flats shared with other students. This is an opportunity to join the student's life and get to know the life of the millenary cities of Córdoba and Seville.

ETEA-Loyola, through our partners Solrent and Olvena, guarantees quality flats for our international students, with a good service all through their stay. Students can see the photos of the flats, seek for information regarding location, price and description of the flats and book a reservation prior to their arrival.

Loyola School of Languages, Culture and Communication is the centre where you will develop language and cultural competences that will enable you to experience real communication contexts. We want you to live, study or work in a foreign country. The language must not be a barrier.

We are also a meeting place for different cultures, where you will be able to share experiences and knowledge in interculturality, thus developing positive attitudes towards language diversity and cultural pluralism of the present world. Therefore, we want to contribute to train a pacific society who recognizes and accepts others.

We offer language courses in English, French, German, Spanish and Chinese.
